

EXHIBIT 8

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
WESTERN DISTRICT OF WASHINGTON
AT SEATTLE

KARLENA DAWSON, et al.,

Petitioner-Plaintiffs,

V.

NATHALIE ASHER, et al.,

Respondent-Defendants.

CASE NO. C20-0409JLR-MAT

ORDER DENYING
TEMPORARY RESTRAINING
ORDER

I. INTRODUCTION

Before the court is Petitioner-Plaintiffs Karlena Dawson, Alfredo Espinoza Esparza, Normal Lopez-Nunez, Marjoris Ramirez Ochoa, Maria Gonzalez Mendoza, Joe Hlupheka Bayana, Leonidas Plutin Hernandez, Kelvin Melgar Alas, and Jesus Gonzalez Herrera’s (collectively, “Plaintiffs”) motion for a temporary restraining order (“TRO”). (Mot. (Dkt. # 2).) Respondent-Defendants Nathalie Asher, Matthew T. Albence, Steven Langford, and United States Immigration and Customs Enforcement (“ICE”) (collectively, “Defendants”) filed a response. (See Resp. (Dkt. # 28).)

The court has reviewed the motion, the response, the petition and complaint¹ (Compl. (Dkt. # 1)), the parties' submissions in support of and in opposition to the motion, the relevant portions of the record, and the applicable law. Being fully advised,² the court DENIES the motion.

II. BACKGROUND

Plaintiffs are nine individuals currently held in civil detention by ICE at the Tacoma Northwest Detention Center (“NWDC”) in Tacoma, Washington. (See Compl. ¶¶ 39-66.) On March 16, 2020, Plaintiffs filed their complaint, seeking a writ of habeas corpus, or in the alternative, injunctive relief, against Defendants. (See id. at 20.) Plaintiffs represent that they are “particularly vulnerable to serious illness or death if infected by COVID-19” as a result of their age and/or medical condition. (See id. ¶¶ 39-66.) Plaintiffs then filed the present motion, in which they seek “immediate release” from detention as they await adjudication of their immigration cases. (See Mot. at 7.) They argue that “[t]he conditions of immigration detention facilities pose a heightened public health risk for the spread of COVID-19” due to “crowding, the proportion of vulnerable people detained, and often scant medical care resources,” in addition to the inability to achieve the social

11

¹ Petitioner-Plaintiffs' initial filing is a "petition for writ of habeas corpus . . . and complaint for injunctive relief." (See Compl. at 1.) For simplicity's sake, the court refers to the parties as "Plaintiffs" and "Defendants" and the petition-complaint as the "complaint."

² Neither party requests oral argument (see Mot. at 1; Resp. at 1), and the court finds oral argument unnecessary to its disposition of the motion, see Local Rules W.D. Wash. LCR 7(b)(4); LCR 65(b)(3).

1 distancing needed to effectively prevent the spread of COVID-19. (See id.) The court
 2 now considers the motion.

3 III. ANALYSIS

4 Plaintiffs contend that their continued detention in the face of the COVID-19
 5 pandemic violates their Fifth Amendment right to reasonable safety while in custody.
 6 (See Mot. at 12.) For the reasons set forth below, the court DENIES Plaintiffs' motion
 7 for a TRO.

8 A. Legal Standard

9 The standard for issuing a TRO is the same as the standard for issuing a
 10 preliminary injunction. See New Motor Vehicle Bd. of Cal. v. Orrin W. Fox Co., 434
 11 U.S. 1345, 1347 n.2 (1977). A TRO is “an extraordinary remedy that may only be 12 awarded upon a clear showing that the plaintiff is entitled to such relief.” *Winter v. Nat.
 13 Res. Def. Council, Inc.*, 555 U.S. 7, 24 (2008). “The proper legal standard for 14 preliminary injunctive relief requires a party to demonstrate (1) ‘that he is likely to 15 succeed on the merits, (2) that he is likely to suffer irreparable harm in the absence of 16 preliminary relief, (3) that the balance of equities tips in his favor, and (4) that an 17 injunction is in the public interest.’” Stormans, Inc. v. Selecky, 586 F.3d 1109, 1127 (9th
 18 Cir. 2009) (citing Winter, 555 U.S. at 20).

19 As an alternative to this test, a preliminary injunction is appropriate if “serious
 20 questions going to the merits were raised and the balance of the hardships tips sharply in 21 the plaintiff’s favor,” thereby allowing preservation of the status quo when complex legal 22 questions require further inspection or deliberation. All. for the Wild Rockies v. Cottrell,

1 632 F.3d 1127, 1134-35 (9th Cir. 2011). However, the “serious questions” approach
 2 supports the court’s entry of a TRO only so long as the plaintiff also shows that there is a
 3 likelihood of irreparable injury and that the injunction is in the public interest. Id. at 4 1135. The moving party bears the burden of persuasion and must make a clear showing
 5 that it is entitled to such relief. Winter, 555 U.S. at 22.

6 B. Plaintiffs’ Motion

7 The court concludes that Plaintiffs do not meet their burden to make a clear
 8 showing that they are likely to succeed on the merits or that they are likely to face
 9 irreparable harm. Therefore, the court DENIES Plaintiffs’ motion for a TRO.³

10 1. Likelihood of Success on the Merits

11 To evaluate the constitutionality of a pretrial detention condition under the Fifth 12 Amendment, a district court must determine whether those conditions “amount to 13 punishment of the detainee.” Bell v. Wolfish, 441 U.S. 520, 535, 99 S. Ct. 1861, 1872, 60
 14 L. Ed. 2d 447 (1979); see also see also Kingsley v. Hendrickson, --- U.S. ---, 135 S. Ct.
 15 2466, 2473-74 (2015). Punishment may be shown through express intent or a restriction
 16 or condition that is not “reasonably related to a legitimate governmental objective.” Bell,
 17 441 U.S. at 539.

20 ³ Having concluded that Plaintiffs fail to meet the first two prongs of the TRO standard,
 21 the court finds it unnecessary to address the third and fourth prongs. Defendants also raise 22 arguments based on Article III standing and the limits of the habeas statutes. Plaintiffs have not had an opportunity to respond to those arguments, and because they are not necessary to resolve Plaintiffs’ present motion, the court leaves them for another day.

1 First, Plaintiffs do not present allegations or evidence to show Defendants have an
 2 “express intent” to punish Plaintiffs. (See generally Mot.) Second, preventing detained
 3 aliens from absconding and ensuring that they appear for removal proceedings is a
 4 legitimate governmental objective. See Jennings v. Rodriguez, --- U.S ---, 138 S. Ct. 830,
 5 836 (2018); Demore v. Kim, 538 U.S. 510, 523 (2003); Zadvydas v. Davis, 533 U.S. 678,
 6 690-91 (2001). Third, Plaintiffs’ current confinement does not appear excessive in 7 relation to that objective. Plaintiffs do not cite to authority, and the court is aware of 8 none, under which the fact of detention itself becomes an “excessive” condition solely 9 due to the risk of a communicable disease outbreak—even one as serious as COVID-19.

10 Plaintiffs’ cited authority addresses the exposure of inmates or detainees to 11 existing conditions within the facility at issue. See, e.g., Hutto v. Finney, 437 U.S. 678, 12 682-83 (1978) (mingling of inmates with infectious diseases with others); Gates v.
 13 Collier, 501 F.2d 1291, 1300 (5th Cir. 1974) (same); Helling v. McKinney, 509 U.S. 25 at 14 33, 35 (1993) (placement of inmate with emphasema in a cell with a cellmate who 15 smoked often). Here, there is no evidence that anyone at NWDC has COVID-19, and 16 Plaintiffs do not address the measures Defendants are taking to prevent such a spread 17 from occurring. (See Resp. at 3-6 (detailing measures to prevent the spread of 18 COVID-19, including suspending social visitation, assessing detainees for fever and 19 respiratory illness, isolating detainees with COVID-19-compatible symptoms, and 20 instructing detainees on hand washing and hygiene).) Finally, even if Plaintiffs could 21 show a Fifth Amendment violation, Plaintiffs provide no authority under which such a 22 violation would justify immediate release, as opposed to injunctive relief that would

1 leave Plaintiffs detained while ameliorating any alleged violative conditions within the 2 facility. Thus, the court concludes that Plaintiffs fail to meet their burden of clearly
3 showing that they are likely to succeed on the merits of their claims.

4 2. Irreparable Harm

5 Plaintiffs do not show that “irreparable injury is likely in the absence of an
6 injunction.” Winter, 555 U.S. at 22. The “possibility” of harm is insufficient to warrant
7 the extraordinary relief of a TRO. See id. There is no evidence of an outbreak at the 8 detention center or that Defendants’ precautionary measures are inadequate to contain 9 such an outbreak or properly provide medical care should it occur.⁴ Accordingly, the 10 court concludes that Plaintiffs fail to meet their burden of clearly showing that irreparable
11 harm is likely in the absence of an injunction.

12 IV. CONCLUSION

13 For the foregoing reasons, the court DENIES Plaintiffs’ motion for a temporary 14 restraining order (Dkt. # 2).

pandemic. The court emphasizes that this order is based on and extends no further than the narrow set of facts, arguments, and requested relief presently before the court.
